

CONTRIBUTIONS BY SCHOOLS FOR THE UNESCO NOMINATION OF HAWKER CULTURE IN SINGAPORE

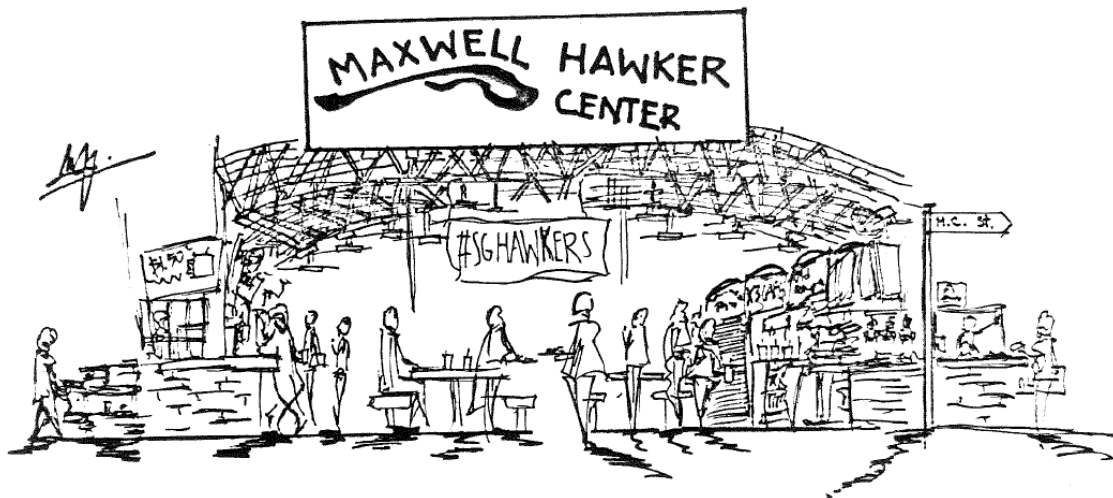

In November 2018, students from St Gabriel's Primary School dressed up as hawkers from yesteryear to engage visitors at the Our SG Hawker Culture Travelling Exhibition during its run at the National Museum of Singapore.

"Fond Memories of Toa Payoh" was a collaborative effort between Pei Chun Primary School and First Toa Payoh Primary School. As part of the project, students documented the lives of four residents in Toa Payoh, one of which being the first and second-generation owners of Hainan Cuisine & Snacks located at Kim Keat Palm Market & Food Centre.

Students from Ngee Ann Polytechnic volunteering at the Our SG Hawker Culture Travelling Exhibition held at their campus in November 2018.

A sketch of the popular Maxwell Food Centre by a student from Hwa Chong Institution.

A drawing displaying the wide variety of food and common terms heard at a Hawker Centre
– Riverside Secondary School

Show your love & appreciation for Singapore Hawker Culture!

- What do you appreciate about hawker centres?
- What fond memories do you have of hawker centres?
- How is hawker culture a way of life for Singaporeans?
- How are hawker centres a reflection of Singapore's multicultural society?

Please share your reflections (through words or sketches).

- ① Hawker centres offer a wide spread of food choices that makes it difficult for you to decide! 😊
- ② I remembered those visits when each of my family members would order a different dish and we ended up eating each other's food!
- ③ Hawker culture portrays Singapore's multicultural society with people of different races and religions coming together to enjoy the different food!
- ④ Every single Singaporean would have a fond memory of hawker centres in the past or at present!

SEDAP!!!

Food Galore

Students from Radin Mas Primary School sharing their thoughts on Hawker Culture on a specially designed worksheet by one of their teachers.